

REYNOLDS

“Georgetown was the school I had my heart set on even as I was touring many other colleges,” Reynolds said. “It seemed like it had everything I needed and wanted to succeed.”

One of the defining moments in her decision came during the recruiting process when she had the opportunity to run with the current Georgetown cross country and track athletes.

“That experience really opened my eyes to what an amazing school

Georgetown is and how many new things I could learn and experience,” Reynolds said. “I felt like I could really fit in and be a really incredible runner there.”

Before transitioning to the next level, Reynolds is focused on refining her pacing and finishing kick — two key elements she hopes to master in preparation for college competition.

“I have realized as I’ve gotten into running how important it is to pace yourself,” Reynolds said. “You can’t start a race too fast because then you’re exhausted and burnt out, but if you start too slow, you lack the energy to finish with a good kick. I really would like to get this down before I begin participating in college meets and the competition increases.”

Reynolds credits her parents and coaches for helping her reach this point in her athletic and academic journey.

“My parents have always been the most encouraging and amazing part of searching, applying, and committing to Georgetown,” Reynolds said. “They wanted me to be happy and be able to run and study what I wanted. My coaches also deserve a big thank you. I could always depend on Mr. and Mrs. Coleman for just about anything during my running career.”

Williamstown Head Coach Adam Coleman has witnessed Reynolds’ dedication firsthand and believes she will continue to thrive at the next level.

“Cam has been a great addition to Williamstown, both as a runner and a good human being,” Adam Coleman said. “She has always pushed herself to meet the goals that she sets, and watching this improvement has been great. Cam is the type of athlete that leads by example. She is always willing to do whatever is needed at practice to meet goals. We know Cam will be successful in any area that she puts her mind to, and we are excited to watch her in the upcoming chapters of her life.”

Assistant Coach Kendal Coleman echoed that sentiment, expressing confidence in Reynolds’ future.

“We are very excited to see what Cameron will accomplish while at Georgetown with other Williamstown alumni and after her running career ends,” Coleman said. “She will accomplish anything she puts her mind to. We are very proud of her.”

As Reynolds prepares for her final high school track season, she does so with excitement for the opportunities ahead—ready to take on new challenges and build on the foundation she has established at Williamstown.
