HORSES

“She didn’t qualify for anything at school so we were looking for some way to get her some help.”

They drove to Shelbyville once a week for 35 weeks over a two-year period, and saw an improvement in their daughter. However, the results did not come overnight.

“Sabrina was three years old, and we asked her if she wanted to ride a horse, and of course, she said yes,” Marchetta Garrison said. “They put her on that horse and she screamed at the top of her lungs. This place was six or eight miles out of Shelbyville and I bet people in town heard her. I went in and talked to her and she calmed down and never had another problem.”

Part of the issue, she added, is that special needs children do not like to be taken out of their comfort zone.

In the past 20 years, hundreds of children and adults from Taylor and surrounding counties have been coming to the REATH Center. It has made a difference in their lives.

Their clients include children under five to people in their 50s. Some never get on a horse. They may help groom the horse which helps stretch muscles. Instead of riding a horse, some will only get on an Equicizer.

“That was developed by a jockey,” Sammy said. “It is the Rolls Royce of rocking horses.”

The 2025 sessions will begin in a few weeks with sessions on Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Each person will ride a horse for 45 minutes. It takes more manpower than just the Garrisons to make to make the night run smoothly.

“We have a lot of volunteers who come out and help,” Marchetta said.

“Some of them have been with us for years. You have to be 14-years-old to work with the riders so those who are younger than that are barn buddies. They will clean the barns and groom the horses before the riders get here.”

The Garrisons have three horses. Each rider will have a person on each side and another person leading the horse.

“It takes a special horse,” Marchetta said. “We’re not going to bring a horse out here and put a child on the next day. It takes lots of work to get them ready. They don’t need to be very tall because a lot of our side walkers are females and you don’t have a lot of tall females.”

The feedback from parents is humbling to the Garrisons.

“We have a child from Marion County who has been coming her for years and he does not talk,” Marchetta said. “When they are on the road and start getting close to our property, his mother says he starts getting very excited.”

Marcetta, a teacher in the Taylor County school system, is hoping to expand the program once she retires.

“Right now, most of what we do is on social media or going to events like our Fourth of July festival downtown or Cow Days in Greensburg,” she said. “We talk to some church and civic groups. I would like to get out more and go to other counties to talk about what we do. There are people in Campbellsville who still come up and ask me.”

Programs such as the therapeutic horse riding are even more important now than they were when REATH started 20 years ago.

According to the Center for Disease Control, the number of people with autism increased from 1 in 110 children in 2006 to 1 in 36 in 2023.
