

Local students take part in 'white coat' ceremony

BY CKNJ NEWS

Makenna Cook and Aubrey Smith, both of Campbellsville, and 23 other Lindsey Wilson University nursing classmates received their white coats last Friday at a ceremony in V.P. Henry Auditorium on the campus in Columbia. The students entered the auditorium wearing blue scrubs and left wearing a white laboratory coat. The “Blessing and White Coat Ceremony”—the 16th time Lindsey Wilson’s nursing program has held the event—signified the 25 students’ formal transition from preclinical courses into the clinical component of their coursework, according to Lindsey Wilson Director of Nursing Dr. Emily Button. “This is an outstanding group of individuals,” Button said during the ceremony. “We are extremely proud of each and every one of you. All of the students here have arrived at this point due to guidance, love and support of others, many of whom are in attendance
