IMPORTANT INFORMATION ABOUT YOUR DRINKING WATER

London Utility Commission Failed to Meet the Requirements of and/or Make Public an Initial Service Line Inventory
Our water system recently violated a drinking water requirement. As our customers, you have a right to know what happened, what you should do, and what we did (are doing) to correct this situation.
We were required to develop and make publicly available an initial inventory of service lines connected to our distribution system by October 16, 2024. The inventory must identify the service line materials as lead, galvanized requiring replacement (GRR)¹, lead-status unknown/unknown, or non-lead. Establishing an inventory of service line materials and identifying the location of lead and GRR service lines is a key step in getting them replaced and protecting public health.
The Service Line Inventory was successfully completed and NO lead service lines were discovered. However, some lines were miscategorized in the original inventory submission and therefore deemed in violation. It is important to understand that NO lead service lines were discovered in the London Utility Commission service area. This notice is for the miscategorization of a limited number of service line materials.
Exposure to lead in drinking water can cause serious health effects in all age groups. Infants and children can have decreases in IQ and attention span. Lead exposure can lead to new learning and behavior problems or exacerbate existing learning and behavior problems. The children of women who are exposed to lead before or during pregnancy can have increased risk of these adverse health effects. Adults can have increased risks of heart disease, high blood pressure, kidney or nervous system problems.
SOURCES OF LEAD
Lead is a naturally occurring metal that can cause negative health effects. People are exposed to lead by eating lead paint chips, ingesting contaminated food or water, and/or by breathing in lead dust. The most common sources of lead in drinking water are lead pipes, faucets, and plumbing fixtures. Household plumbing fixtures, welding solder, and pipe fittings made prior to 1988 may also contain lead.
STEPS TO REDUCE EXPOSURE TO LEAD IN DRINKING WATER

- Let the water run before using it for drinking or cooking. If you have a lead service line, let the water run for 3-5 minutes. If you do not have a lead service line, let the water run for 30-60 seconds. The more time water has been sitting in your pipes, the more lead it may contain.
- Use cold water for drinking, making food, and making baby formula. Hot water releases more lead from pipes than cold water. Boiling water does not reduce lead levels and may actually increase them.
- Treat your water or find an alternative source if a test shows your water has high levels of lead after you let the water run.
- CDC recommends testing blood for lead exposure. There are often no apparent symptoms when a child is exposed to lead. Because of this, a blood test is the best way to determine if a child has been exposed to lead.

WHAT IS BEING DONE?
The service line inventory will be corrected and resubmitted to the Division of Water.
For more information on reducing lead exposure around your home/building and the health effects of lead, visit EPA's Web site at <http://www.epa.gov/lead> or contact your health care provider.
For more information, please contact London Utility Commission at 606-864-2103 or P.O. Box 918, London, KY 40743.
This notice is being sent to you by London Utility Commission. Public Water System ID#: KY0630255. Date distributed: 3/12/2025.
