sure. Unfair to Skenes, you know what I mean? It should be exciting. Miz is going on four days rest for the first time.”

But this showcase should give Misorowski a chance to measure himself against the game’s best.

Skenes indeed has long since graduated from prospect status to solidify himself as one of the game’s top pitchers. The No. 1 overall pick in the 2023 draft finished third in the NL Cy Young Award voting last year and has gone 15-9 with a 1.91 ERA and 276 strikeouts over 235 innings in his young career.

“It’s like everything

just flows off his back,” Pirates manager Don Kelly said. “He never lets anything affect him too much, the way that he’s able to adjust and adapt not just start to start, from inning to inning, batter to batter, understanding his stuff, what’s working and what’s not.”

In his two previous appearances against the Brewers, Skenes has struck out 19 while allowing only four hits and one run over 13 innings. The last time he pitched at Milwaukee, Skenes pitched seven innings of no-hit ball before departing as the Pirates limited the Brewers to one total hit in a 1-0 victory last July.

Misorowski has been equally effective in a significantly smaller sample size.

He made his major league debut June 12 and held St. Louis hitless for five innings before departing the Brewers’ 6-0 victory with cramping and his right calf and quadriceps. He threw 14 pitches at least 100 mph and reached a top speed of 102.2 that night.

Misorowski came back Friday and had a perfect game going until he walked Byron Buxton and allowed a homer to Matt Wallner in the seventh inning of a 17-6 triumph at Minnesota.

Both teams are eager to see what happens as Misorowski gets to measure himself against one of the game’s most dominant pitchers in Skenes.

“Good luck to the hitters,” Brewers pitcher Brandon Woodruff said. “It’s 100 mph every pitch. It’s kind of crazy in terms of how the game has changed that way. It seems like everybody throws 100 now.

It’s cool. It’s good for the game. It’s two young guys who are obviously really good.”
