MILITARY NEWS:

-“The better trained a soldier, the better are his chances of survival.” This statement was made today by 1st Lt. Leo M. Henderson, in charge of training for Company B, 241st Tank Battalion of the Kentucky National Guard, who urged young men of Somerset to enlist in the National Guard and take six months of basic training with the active Army. Lt. Henderson said, “While we all hope for a lasting peace, we must keep up our guard and train our young citizen-soldiers to assure a strong reserve for our active Army. We must train them well to assure that every man who ends up in combat knows how to take care of himself. This being so, the more training a young man can get, the better are his chances on the battlefield.”
