to an incident at the Parkview Guesthouse on Wednesday, Oct. 1, 2025, at approximately 8:30 p.m.

According to a HPD Facebook post, a fire discovered inside one of the apartments was quickly extinguished soon after first responders arrived. No injuries were reported, the HPD said.

According to the uniform citation, firefighters found a fire starter substance "consistent with napalm" covering the room, as well as light source, a lighter, which police called an incendiary device "underneath clothing that would catch fire quickly." First responders also found a broken light bulb in the trash with the light source's wiring on the ceiling "purposefully exposed," according to the uniform citation.

Police also found a fire starter bottle on a shelf in the apartment.

First responders also found a burning box that was "filled with accelerants" on the grass, according to the uniform citation.

Police were advised by personnel from the Harrodsburg Fire Department that the room had been prepared in a manner "consistent with arson" and that it could have caught fire quickly, "causing damage to the whole building that consists of 19 apartment rooms," according to the uniform citation.

Two witnesses—including the initial caller—told police that a man living in apartment 5 had run out of his room with a box in flames, heading for the front door.

The accused was subsequently located at a nearby fast food restaurant and placed under arrest. Arrest: Dep. Lewis (Franklin County Sheriff's Office). Bond: $250,000 (Woodford County Detention Center).

Friday, Jan. 2, 2026

- Patrick William Joles, 59, of Harrodsburg, was arrested and charged with drunk in public. Arrest: Patrolman Faluconer (Danville Police Department). Released without bond (Boyle County Detention Center).
- Samantha Renea Owens, 31, of Harrodsburg, was served with warrants for failure to appear and nonpay-

Keep the warm air in and cold air out this winter

Louisville Gas and Electric Company and Kentucky Utilities Company are offering tips to help customers better manage energy use during winter months. Sub-freezing temperatures outside can cause your HVAC systems to work overtime to keep the inside a comfortable temperature.

"The weather and how we use energy are two major factors that influence energy bills and that's why we remind customers to take a moment to prepare now before the extreme cold sets in," said Shannon Montgomery, LG&E and KU vice president of Customer Services. "We offer several tips customers can follow now and when the temperature drops that together can help them stay warm and save energy. We also have our largest-ever portfolio of energy-efficiency programs that offer customers monetary incentives for their energy-saving measures."

Following these steps can help keep the warm air in and the cold air out.

- Maintain your system. Have a certified professional give your furnace a tune-up to make sure it's operating efficiently and ready to perform at its best.
- Set your thermostat. If you have a programmable thermostat, you can set it lower when no one is home to maximize energy savings. Setting the thermostat to the lowest comfortable setting can help, and even just one degree can make a difference.
- Close the gaps. Take time to caulk, spray foam or use weather-stripping to seal leaks and gaps around windows, doors and duct work.

- Use your ceiling fans. Set ceiling fans to run clockwise at low speed in the winter to circulate heat more efficiently.
- Don't block the heat. Open curtains and blinds on sun-facing windows to allow the sun's rays to help naturally heat your home. Make sure registers are not blocked by drapes or furniture so warm air can easily circulate.
- Track your energy usage. Customers can now easily track and manage their energy use using the My Meter dashboard. It lets you see how your habits affect your energy use, how extreme weather can change your bills, and lets you track other factors that impact your monthly costs.
- Important safety reminders
- Install carbon monoxide detectors. Make sure you have a working carbon monoxide detector installed on every level of your home, especially around sleeping areas, and test them every month.

- Follow these steps if you smell natural gas (a rotten-egg or sulfur-like odor).
- For LG&E customers. Leave the area immediately then call 911 and LG&E. To contact LG&E, call 502-589-1444 or 800-331-7370 and press 1-1-1.
- Do NOT light a match, turn light switches on or off, use a cell or home phone until you are away from the area, or do anything that could create a spark. Never report a gas leak by email or social media, and don't assume someone else has already called.
- Be careful using space heaters. Keep space heaters at least three feet away from anything flammable, plug it directly into the wall and never leave it turned on unattended. Place it on a stable surface and always turn it off and unplug it when you're done.

- When there is an outage. Never use the stove to heat your home. Make sure portable generators are operated outside and are properly vented.

Additional assistance LG&E and KU understand customers can sometimes have difficulties paying their utility bills. Customers needing to establish a payment arrangement are encouraged to contact LG&E and KU right away or use self-serve options (mobile app, online via My Account or automated phone system), which are available any time 24/7.

There also are a number of community agencies that provide assistance, and customers are encouraged to take advantage of these programs. Visit lge-ku.com/assistance-programs for a list of local community partners in your area.

Donate your Christmas tree to support Kentucky fisheries

Used Christmas trees can have another life after the holiday season.

Natural trees donated to the Kentucky Department of Fish and Wildlife Resources "Christmas for the Fishes" tree recycling program can give a home to fish in many Kentucky lakes in the coming year. This annual program uses evergreens donated after the holiday season to create underwater habitats that help fish thrive.

"Donated Christmas trees are put to work in local reservoirs as fish habitat, where they're arranged in clusters that create dense branches and small pockets for young fish to hide," said Spencer Phillips, a fisheries biologist with Kentucky Fish and Wildlife, in a press release. "These structures also attract sport-fish, offering opportunistic feeding as smaller fish venture out from cover."

Kentucky Fish and Wildlife will be accepting evergreen trees from Dec. 26, 2025, through Jan. 16, 2026, at 37 drop-off locations across the state. Trees should be real, not artificial, and should be free of lights, garland and decorations. Limbs, wreaths, brush or other plants will not be accepted.

Fish thrive in an environment that is full of different types of cover including trees and logs. The donated trees will help restore woody structures that have previously decayed in our lakes, providing protective cover and shade for a variety of fish species.

"Every tree counts," Phillips said. "Each tree can provide benefits for local fisheries for several years, gradually enhancing fish habitat that has been lost over time. Local anglers also benefit from the creation of reliable fishing hotspots around the sunken brush piles."

Donated trees will be anchored to environmentally friendly weights and submerged at various depths in different lakes and reservoirs across Kentucky to provide places for fish to feed, shelter and spawn. They make great refuge and feeding habitat for game fish, as well as small fish and invertebrates that are crucial for a thriving ecosystem.

The locations where trees are installed generally become hot spots for fish species targeted by anglers. These locations are recorded by Kentucky Fish and Wildlife staff and the GPS coordinates made available to anglers through the "Lakes with Fish Attractors" page on the department's website and FishBoatKY app available on the iTunes App and Google Play stores.

Kentucky Fish and Wildlife is funded through the sale of fishing and hunting licenses and permits, boat registrations and related grants. Conserving Kentucky's fishes and their habitats and providing related recreational opportunities are important aspects of the department's mission.

For more information about the Christmas tree recycling program or to find a drop-off location, visit the department's website (fw.ky.gov) or call 1-800-858-1549, 8 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. (ET) weekdays, excluding holidays.
