Spring View Hospital breaks ground on Surgical Services Expansion

LEBANON — Spring View Hospital officially broke ground on Friday, March 13, 2026, on a major expansion of its Surgical Services Department, marking a significant investment in advanced healthcare services and improved patient access for the region.

Currently, Spring View Hospital operates four operating rooms, along with an endoscopy room and a procedure room. Upon completion, the expansion will increase surgical capacity to five fully equipped operating rooms, while maintaining dedicated endoscopy and procedure spaces.

The project also includes construction of a new storage area designed to house large surgical equipment such as C-arms, microscopes, surgical towers, and additional advanced technology. This addition will allow the hospital to fully utilize its new pre-operative area and create a more efficient surgical workflow.

Once operational, patients will move through a streamlined care process — beginning in pre-operative preparation, transitioning to surgery, recovering in the Post-Anesthesia Care Unit (PACU), and completing recovery in Phase II. These enhancements are expected to significantly improve patient

Air Evac Lifeteam breaks ground on new aircraft hangar at Spring View Hospital

LEBANON — Spring View Hospital and Air Evac Lifeteam officially broke ground on Friday, March 13, 2026, on a new aircraft hangar.

The approximately 2,000-square-foot hangar will be constructed on the campus of Spring View Hospital and will support operations for Air Evac 173, which has been based at the hospital since November 1, 2021. The helicopter is currently hangared at the Lebanon-Springfield Airport.

Air Evac 173 is one of nineteen Air Evac helicopters serving Kentucky and is part of Global Medical Response, a national leader in medical transportation services by both ground and air.

The base operates 24 hours a day, seven days a week and is staffed by a critical care transport team consisting of a flight nurse, flight paramedic, and pilot.

The new hangar will allow the aircraft to be housed directly on-site during inclement weather rather than relocating to the airport, improving readiness and response times for emergency calls. The facility will also allow aircraft maintenance to be completed on-site, reducing out-of-service time and ensuring continuous availability for patient transport.

"This project represents an important advancement in emergency care for our region," said Vicki Parks, Chief Executive Officer of Spring View Hospital. "We are incredibly thankful for our partnership with Air Evac Lifeteam and their continued investment in strengthening lifesaving services for the communities we serve together."

The hangar project is funded entirely by Air Evac Lifeteam and Global Medical Response, demonstrating their ongoing commitment to supporting healthcare partners and rural communities.

Dan Durham, Senior Program Manager for Air Evac, highlighted the significance of the investment.

"Our partnership with Spring View Hospital allows us to better serve patients when time matters most," Durham said. "The addition of this hangar enhances operational readiness, protects our aircraft, and ultimately helps us provide faster, more reliable critical care transport for the region."

Hospital and Air Evac leaders emphasized that the project strengthens the continuum of care by connecting rapid emergency response with advanced hospital treatment capabilities.
