aspirations that he continually has helped our program, our people and our students meet.”

Barnhart, 66, was named Kentucky's 10th athletic director in 2002, succeeding Larry Ivy. Kentucky won six NCAA championships under Barnhart, including men's basketball in 2012. Barnhart previously served as athletic director at Oregon State from 1998 to 2002.

Capilouto said Barnhart has agreed to "another new and exciting chapter" as the first executive-in-residence of the UK Sport and Workforce Initiative.

"I'm not sure there's ever a finish line for leaders," Barnhart said. "You get to a spot where you finish one job and the next one starts and then the next task and the next task and the next task. At some point you have to say the baton is someone else's to carry.

"I'm so thankful that Dr. Capilouto is providing a 'what's next' after leaving this position and we can have an impact another way. It will matter to the university, it will matter to our department, it will matter to Kentucky. I'm super appreciative of this opportunity. My love for this place is overflowing."

A native of Kansas City, Kansas, Barnhart earned a bachelor's degree from Ottawa University in Kansas and a master's degree in sports administration from Ohio University.

Barnhart is the second-longest serving athletic director among Power Four schools, behind Oklahoma's Joe Castiglione, who plans to retire in 2028 after 27 years.
