A view from above: Kentucky first in nation to photograph entire geography from sky

BY TOM LATEK
KENTUCKY TODAY

FRANKFORT, Ky. (KT) — Kentucky has become the first state in the nation to capture oblique (side/angle view) photography of its entire geography from the sky, through the KYFromAbove program and its contractor, NV5.

The program achieved this milestone after pilots flew 2,600 flight lines over Kentucky's landscape, travelling 117,000 miles and capturing 40,660 square miles of the state's land, including the cities, towns, farms, lakes, mountains and more.

"This is an amazing resource that will improve public safety, all while boosting our infrastructure projects and economic development," said Gov. Andy Beshear. "These images will have an immediate impact, because they can help first responders find and assist Kentuckians after a 911 call. And they'll have a long-term impact, as more companies and families choose to move to our new Kentucky home. Congratulations to KYFromAbove, NV5 and every pilot that helped us lead the nation and reach this goal of statewide coverage."

Aerial images make it easier for emergency management leaders to assess damage after natural disasters and find safer places to rebuild. They can also enhance:

- Economic site development and selection.
- Plan and design work for infrastructure projects.
- Broadband deployment.
- Wildlife management.
- Property assessment.
- A variety of projects undertaken by engineers, surveyors, real estate firms, commercial developers, roofing and fencing contractors, consultants and other professionals.

The NV5 team completed acquisition of oblique imagery of the entire state in just two years, despite challenging requirements to accurately capture Kentucky's geography. The imagery could only be collected under ideal conditions: minimal leaves on the trees, no clouds, no snow, no flooding and at a sun angle of greater than 30 degrees.

The KY From Above Program was established in 2010 by the Kentucky Geographic Information Advisory Council (GIAC) and is managed by the Commonwealth Office of Technology's Division of Geographic Information. Its mission is to democratize access to geographic information in Kentucky by providing detailed elevation data and aerial photography at KYFromAbove.ky.gov, all at no cost to government leaders, the private sector and all Kentuckians.

Cohen offers inside knowledge in Trump's hush money trial

BY MICHAEL R. SISAK, ERIC TUCKER, MICHELLE L. PRICE AND COLLEEN LONG
ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK — It wasn't until after a decade in the fold, after his family pleaded with him, after the FBI raided his office, apartment and hotel room, Michael Cohen testified Tuesday, that he finally decided to turn on Donald Trump.

The complicated break led to a 2018 guilty plea to federal charges involving a payment to the porn actor Stormy Daniels to bury her story of an alleged sexual encounter with Trump and to other, unrelated crimes. And it's that insider knowledge of shady deals that pushed Manhattan prosecutors to make Cohen the star witness in their case against Trump about that same payment, which they say was an illegal effort to influence the 2016 presidential election. Under questioning this week, Cohen has described the nuts-and-bolts of how the scheme worked.

"To keep the loyalty and to do the things that he had asked me to do, I violated my moral compass, and I suffered the penalty, as has my family," Cohen testified Tuesday.

Defense attorneys tried to draw attention to Cohen's social media commentary and persistent insults of Trump, expletives included, to try to undermine him as a witness. But the bombast so far has been minimal from the man who was defined for years by his braggadocio as Trump's problem-zapper.

Instead, his testimony about purposefully mislabeled checks, false receipts and blind loyalty placed Trump at the center of the scheme and underscored the foundational argument of the case — that it's not about the spectacle of what Trump was paying
