

Celebrating the spirit of Ameican workers

As a retired Navy SEAL and now a Kentucky senator, I have seen firsthand that freedom and prosperity do not come without sacrifice. Whether on the battlefield or in the fields of Kentucky, it is the determination, grit, and faith of hard-working Americans that keep our nation strong. Labor Day is more than a long weekend. It is a moment to honor the men and women who rise before dawn to tend their farms, build our communities, teach our children, protect our streets, and heal the sick. Their work is the foundation of Kentucky's future, and it reflects the same values I learned in uniform: discipline, teamwork, and commitment to something bigger than yourself.

Here in our district and across the commonwealth, we see those values alive every day. Farmers tending their crops, small business owners keeping their doors open, nurses and teachers giving their all, and first responders who stand watch while others rest. Their sacrifice reminds us that labor is not just about wages. It is about service, responsibility, and love of neighbor and country.

Kentucky has always been blessed with a resilient workforce. That strength has powered our state's record-breaking economic investments, and it will secure the next generation's opportunity. That is why my mission as your senator is to keep fighting for policies that empower families, support education, and give our workers every chance to succeed.

This Labor Day, let us remember that America is at
