Keegan Bradley celebrates with the trophy after his winning putt on the 18th green during the final round of the Travelers Championship 2025 at TPC River Highlands on Sunday in Cromwell, Connecticut.

Bradley to re-think Ryder Cup decision after Travelers win

BY JOE ARRUDA, HARTFORD COURANT

HARTFORD, CONN.

Keegan Bradley wanted to play for Team USA in the Ryder Cup. So when he got the call from the PGA of America and was offered captaincy last summer, after Tiger Woods turned it down, he was caught off guard. The U.S. hasn't had a playing captain at the Ryder Cup in more than 60 years. "When I get the call I'm thinking, I really want to be on the team," Bradley said Sunday. "The first thing they said was, 'We want you to be the first playing captain since Arnold Palmer in 1962.' And, I mean, my head was spinning."

Bradley had insisted the only way he would play in the Ryder Cup – which will take place at Bethpage Black in Farmingdale, N.Y. in late September – was if he were among the top six automatic qualifiers. But, after he won the Travelers Championship in Cromwell, Conn., this week, his decision became more complicated. He moved up from No. 17 to No. 9 in the U.S. Ryder Cup rankings, clearly among the 12 best U.S. players, and could choose to put himself on the team with one of his six captain's picks. "Listen, this changes the story a little bit," Bradley said Sunday, minutes after sinking a clutch birdie putt at the center of a packed amphitheater surrounding No. 18, an atmosphere he could compare to his previous Ryder Cup experiences as a player in 2012 and '14. "I never would have thought about playing if I hadn't won," he said. "This definitely opens the door to play. I don't know if I'm going to do it or not, but I certainly have to take a pretty hard look at what's best for the team and we'll see. We still got – it's still June, so we still got a long ways to go. This definitely changes things a little bit, and we'll all get together and figure out the best way to do this."

There haven't been many golfers who've been able to experience what Bradley did at TPC River Highlands about 6 p.m. ET on Sunday. Bradley, a Vermont native and a humble representative of New England golf on the PGA Tour, always has a good crowd behind him at The Travelers, the only PGA Tour event in the region. But this week, with the "U-S-A" chants heating up as the captain hung around the top of the leader board and ultimately took his first lead on the final hole, was a bit different.

"I've always gotten really great support here, but I don't know, today was insane. It's something that I didn't expect when I got this job. It just never crossed my mind. I get it when I'm playing good golf, I get it when I'm pumping gas, I get it in restaurants, people are saying it, but I never expected this sort of support for the Ryder Cup captain," Bradley said.

"I had this epiphany at the PGA Championship when I was getting these loud USA cheers that I don't think any player in the history of the game has experienced what I'm experiencing in that I'm a Ryder Cup captain, in my eyes still one of the best players in the world trying to win majors and tournaments. And not a lot of people have experienced coming down the stretch of a tournament as the Ryder Cup captain, of big tournaments, and I've tried to embrace that and tried to feed off the energy, but they were really loud this week."

A year ago, when he got the call to be captain, Bradley would've never thought he'd be ranked No. 7 in the world golf rankings, which he accomplished with Sunday's championship. His thoughts after accepting the job were solely on the job. He said on Wednesday, before The Travelers began, that he's enjoying the work that comes with the captaincy – thinking about pairings, watching other Americans play and talking with scouts, scheduling and discussing strategy with his four vice captains: Jim Furyk, Kevin Kisner, Webb Simpson and Brandt Snedeker.
