Oath of new office

Aaron Thompson pledges to fulfill the duties of his new office as a member of the Kentucky House of Representatives from Supreme Court Judge Bob Conley at a ceremony on Saturday, December 28, as his wife Brittany watches.

Conley to head mental health judicial group

FRANKFORT – Justice Robert B. Conley of the Supreme Court of Kentucky is the new chair of the Kentucky Judicial Commission on Mental Health. Chief Justice-elect Debra Hembree Lambert appointed Justice Conley as her successor in December.

“Justice Conley has consistently demonstrated exceptional dedication and leadership,” Chief Justice-elect Lambert said. “I am confident that under his guidance the commission will continue to thrive and further its mission to support the judiciary in these critical efforts.”

Court of Appeals Chief Judge Larry E. Thompson, who serves as vice chair for the commission, said, “I would like to congratulate Justice Conley on his appointment as chair of the Kentucky Judicial Commission on Mental Health. His commitment to advancing initiatives within our justice system is truly inspiring. I am honored to continue serving as vice chair and look forward to working alongside him as we strive to create meaningful change and ensure justice with compassion for all Kentuckians.”

Chief Justice-elect Lambert announced Justice Conley’s new role at the KJCMH meeting in December. She passed the baton in preparation for taking the seat of chief justice of the commonwealth when she’s sworn in Jan. 7.

“I am deeply honored to accept the role of chair for the Kentucky Judicial Commission on Mental Health,” Justice Conley said. “This commission represents a vital commitment to addressing the intersection of mental health and our justice system. Together, we will continue to champion innovative solutions, support individuals and families in need, and ensure that our courts are a place of compassion, fairness and understanding. I look forward to working alongside our dedicated members and partners to advance this important mission.”
