Legislative Update by Sen. Robin Webb

This past week, I had the opportunity to represent Kentucky at the Southern Legislative Conference (SLC) in Birmingham, Alabama, where legislators from across the south gathered to collaborate, share policy solutions, and strengthen regional partnerships. Kentucky was well represented throughout the conference, and I'm especially proud that we will be hosting next year's event in Lexington. It's a great opportunity to showcase our commonwealth's leadership and hospitality on a national stage.

While in Birmingham, I addressed the Sportsmen's Caucus, where we discussed the importance of preserving our outdoor heritage and strengthening conservation efforts. The National Assembly of Sportsmen's Caucuses (NASC) also hosted a reception for southern members and prospective members. As always, the Kentucky Sportsmen's Caucus showed up in full force. NASC President Rep. Jeff Wardlaw of Arkansas and I, both past presidents and current Executive Council members, spoke to the group about ongoing priorities and the value of collaboration among our states.

I've had the privilege of serving on the Agriculture and Rural Development Committee for most of my tenure in the legislature and was honored to serve on the nominating committee this year. Congratulations to Sen. Sandy Crawford of Missouri, who was selected as the new chair. I also want to thank Rep. Danny Crawford of Alabama for his years of dedicated leadership and his longstanding friendship.

In addition to the agriculture and natural resources meetings, I participated in the Economic Development Committee's discussions around disaster resilience, an issue that remains incredibly important to Kentucky communities.

Back here at home, I've also remained active in our state's efforts on disaster recovery and preparedness.

The second meeting of the Kentucky Disaster Resilience Task Force took place this week, and my co-chair, Rep. Jonathan Freeland, led a very informative and productive discussion.

We heard from experts from Western Kentucky University's Disaster Science Operations Center, the Mayfield Graves Long Term Recovery Group, Community Action Kentucky, and Pennyryle Allied Community Services. I also met with several stakeholders in preparation for upcoming work and began conversations around a potential project to support our region's resilience.

I wrapped up the week with a full agenda in the Natural Resources Committee, where conversations focused on energy, water, and environmental policy, all topics that will continue to shape Kentucky's future.

As always, I am grateful for the opportunity to represent you, to bring Kentucky's voice to regional conversations, and to apply those lessons learned to the work we're doing back home.

Sen. Robin Webb, R-Grayson, represents the 18th Senate District, which includes Boyd, Carter, Greenup, and Lewis Counties. She serves as co-chair of the Disaster Prevention and Resiliency Task Force. She is a member of the Interim Joint Committees on Agriculture, Appropriations and Revenue, Families and Children, and Natural Resources and Energy.

Budget Preparation and Submission, Capital Projects and Bond Review Subcommittee on Justice and Judiciary. Additionally, she serves on several statutory committees, including 2026-2028 Council.

Additional opioid funds are coming

FRANKFORT – Continuing to combat Kentucky's worst man-made crisis, Attorney General Russell Coleman announced last week that his Office had secured $14.4 million in additional settlement dollars from opioid manufacturers.

"These companies preyed on the people of Kentucky and profited off our pain. On behalf of the families we serve, our Office will continue holding them accountable," said Attorney General Coleman. "While these resources won't fill the empty seats at Kentucky dinner tables, they will help fuel prevention, treatment and recovery efforts across our Commonwealth and help save lives from the scourge of addiction."

As part of the agreement, seven of the companies, Alygoen, Amneal, Apotex, Hikma, Mylan, Sun, and Zydus are prohibited from promoting or marketing opioids and opioid products and making or selling any product that contains more than 40 mg of oxycodone per pill. They will also be required to create a monitoring and reporting system that would flag suspicious orders. An eighth company, Indivior, meanwhile, has agreed not to manufacture or sell opioid products for the next 10 years, but it will be able to continue marketing and selling medications to treat opioid use disorder.
