LAWRENCEBURG – A man has entered a guilty plea on various charges, including operating a vehicle under the influence for the fourth or greater offense.

On Oct. 6, Charles Nichols Drury, 35, entered a guilty plea in Anderson County Circuit Court on a variety of charges.

According to assistant commonwealth attorney Zachary M. Becker, Drury pled guilty to driving under the influence, fourth or greater offense; driving on a DUI suspended license; failure to wear a seatbelt; and being a persistent felony offender.

When he committed the offenses, Drury was on probation for two prior Anderson County indictment convictions for felony offense.

His probation was revoked due to the new charges.

As part of the plea agreement negotiated by Becker and defense counsel, Drury would receive a 13-year sentence in prison. Circuit Judge Melanie Brummer was in agreement with the guilty plea.

The case was investigated by the Lawrenceburg Police Department.

In a release from Commonwealth Attorney Hart T. Megibben's office, "the dangers of drunk and drugged drivers on our roads simply cannot be overstated. Each one of us is required to share these same roadways, to drive to work, to church, to our children's schools and practices. And at any given moment, any one of
