Under Indictment

The grand jury which has been in session returned to the court room Tuesday afternoon with five indictments. This is an unusual move on the part of a grand jury because of the fact that the 12 men returned to their room this morning to continue their investigatory work.

The indictments included W.M. Green, charged with willful murder. His trial was set for Friday without bond. Green confessed to the killing of Elmer Satterly and was held to the grand jury without bail.

Hosea Casey and Everett Casey were indicted on the charge of grand larceny and held to trial on Friday on bond of $1,500 each. The two men are charged with the theft of cattle.

Marion Searcy was indicted on a charge of deserting an indigent child and his trial set for the next March term. Searcy has agreed to support the child until his trial.

Dee Disponett was indicted on a charge of carrying a concealed deadly weapon. The indictment was brought as the outcome of a fight brought on by Disponett which occurred in the hall outside the courtroom Tuesday morning.

Virgil Miller and Clyde Inman were indicted on a charge of grand larceny which grew out of the theft of about 40 chickens from the home of Joe S. Carter near Alton.
