including a tip from Williamstown's Maci Spivey and a block by Eliza Thompson.

Grant County eventually pulled ahead, taking an 18-13 lead before closing the second set 25-17.

Williamstown again stayed close early in the third set and held a 3-2 advantage before Grant County regained control.

The Lady Braves built an 11-4 lead and went on to take the final set 25-10, completing the 3-0 victory.

Akers said the rivalry adds energy to the matchup.

"It's really fun. I like the rivalry that we have," Akers said. "You always get so hype."

Despite the competition, she said players from the two teams know one another and trade some friendly banter across the net.

"We talk and troll and kind of banter," Akers said.

For Akers, the cause behind the match was just as important as the competition.

"Love what it supports, raising money for them," she said. "Getting decorated, go all out for them."

Williamstown's Bella Cummins said the Lady Demons worked to maintain their energy even as Grant County pulled ahead.

"I think we did pretty good against them," Cummins said. "We just had to keep our energy up, even if we were losing. We were just trying to be happy and stay positive."

She also appreciated seeing the rivalry used to bring attention to cancer awareness.

"I think it's really important to recognize breast cancer awareness," Cummins said. "I think what we do here is great and amazing how we do it."

For one night, the county rivalry provided an opportunity for both teams and their supporters to rally around something larger than the final score.
